Qi Yong has spent most of his career as an administrative staff member in government departments at different administrative levels. He has some experience as a participant in diplomatic activities. This is his first time abroad.

Gansu Province lies in the northwest of China. It is one of the most significant cradles of the Chinese nation and its civilization and among the first regions to engage in cultural and economic exchanges and cooperation between the East and the West. The world-famous Silk Road stretches over 1,600 kilometers in Gansu. The province covers an area of 425,800 square kilometers and has a population of 27 million. Gansu is rich in cultural and tourism resources thanks to its profound cultural heritage, beautiful natural scenery and colorful folk customs. Gansu is especially attractive to tourists because of the unique charm of the famous ancient Silk Road and the brand name "Exquisite Silk Road and Splendid Gansu". A number of culture-themed tourist routes have been developed focusing on Dunhuang City, the Silk Road and the Yellow River. With the implementation of the Belt and Road Initiative, Gansu was designated as a key gateway for opening to the west and a strategic base for sub-regional cooperation, giving it strong late-developing advantages.
